

Brunello di Montalcino Riserva Poggio al Vento 2004

Nearly didn't make it on account of the price, but the wine's rich complexity won the judges over. 'An amazing nose – bitter chocolate, cedar, liquorice, soot and ash!' said Coq d'Argent's Olivier Marie, suggesting venison or leg of lamb. 'Serious dark chocolate and savoury spiciness with balance and power,' said consultant Casper Auchterlonie. 'Precise, effortless and wonderful,' added consultant Natasha Hughes. 'Has a great future.'
