Looking Back to Look Forward: Back
Vintage Brunello Eric Guido, Jan 2022

Dusty cherry and leather are complemented by cedar spice box and sage as the 2012 Brunello di Montalcino Riserva Poggio al Vento opens in the glass. It's silky-smooth and smoky, with dark mineral-tinged red berries and sour citrus tones cascading across the palate. Grippy tannins linger long, and although this is structured, there's a bit of early appeal here that should make the 2012 more enjoyable sooner than later, yet still excellent over the medium term. I'm loving it today, and I feel that extra time in bottle has really brought forward a greater sense of harmony. This is an excellent effort in a warm and dry vintage. Eric Guido October 2021
